

Next Wave Wins Innovation Award

Next Wave Logistics Inc. has been awarded the “Entrepreneurial Innovation Award” by The Business Ledger, a business newspaper serving the Chicago Suburbs. “We think we have a great story to tell, and it’s an honor to be recognized as innovators”, says Harold Zimmerman, Co-Founder and CEO of Next Wave.

This recognition is significant for Next Wave as well as for all Chicago area business. James E. Elsener, publisher of The Business Ledger is “pleased to recognize the important role of entrepreneurs in our dynamic suburban community through this awards program. That we are honoring seventeen men and women who have contributed to the economic strength of this area is in keeping with our mission of telling the stories of successful business owners.”

Next Wave Logistics, a technology and business solutions company based in Naperville, IL is one of only two companies to win the Entrepreneurial Innovation Award recognizing the innovation and vision that have been the foundation on which the company has thrived since day one. “Next Wave has always believed in revolution, not simply staying ahead of the curve but creating the curve”, says Zimmerman.

Mr. Zimmerman will accept the honor at the awards presentation Wednesday, September 27th at the Oakbrook Terrace headquarters of the Chicago Automobile Trade Association. The night will include an address from keynote speaker, Ronald L. Taylor, CEO of DeVry, Inc. Other award categories include: Lifetime Achievement, Early Stage, Growth, Minority Entrepreneur, Service to Entrepreneur and Young Entrepreneur.